Saba

November 16 – 23, 2013

Saba was first discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1493, and rarely visited until recent times. Saba makes up part of the Dutch West Indies. Follow in his footsteps and discover Saba, now a favorite destination of modern day explorers, photographers, naturalists and, of course, divers. The moment you arrive, you'll understand why.

The island itself - just thirteen square kilometers - is home to an extinct volcano that rises eight hundred meters above the sea. Just offshore, Saba offers incredible coral reefs teeming with over 150 kinds of coral and more than 500 species of fish.
